NSRA Shooting Council report 27th of March 2021

In early February the NSRA's CEO Ian Root took early retirement due to on going health problems. Dave Froggett and Philip Pride are covering the position of CEO temporarily.

Due to environmental issues about lead in the environment it was reported that the continued use of lead in ammunition is still a major concern to shooting sports. Dave Froggett said that tests carried out on some alternatives to lead had been disappointing with very poor accuracy at longer ranges.

Various amendments to the Benchrest and Electronic Target System rules were discussed at length during the meeting and the amended rules are now available on the NSRA website.

Information on the reopening of indoor clubs from the 12th of April is now available on the NSRA website.

Due to a problem experienced by the association in processing membership payments by direct debit recently all members are asked to check that any payments that they expect to have been made in the last few months have actually been made. The problem has now been rectified but please check because if your payment did not go through your membership and therefore your insurance and other benefits will not be valid.

The next Shooting Council meeting is due to be held at the end of July 2021.
